02

AGREEMENTS

Head tenancy and sub-tenancy

02

CORE QUESTIONS

Early possession and renewal

THE CENTRAL DISTINCTION

Recovery requires breach and procedure; renewal turns on rent determination.

02 / ISSUES TO BE ADDRESSED

(a) FORFEITURE BEFORE EXPIRY

Can Frederick lawfully forfeit the tenancy and recover possession before expiry?

A breach must be established, forfeiture clauses complied with, and the required notice validly served.

(b) RENEWAL AT EXPIRY

Can Angela enforce a renewal of the tenancy upon expiry of the 2-year term?

The key question is whether the new rent can be validly determined. The noise complaint is background only.

HEAD TENANCY

A fixed term of two years

Facts, allegations and verification

Separate the original briefing from matters that still need supporting material.

Item	Position in the briefing	Review prompt
Tenancy term	Two years	Locate the executed head tenancy.
Subletting	Angela sublet to Charles	Check restrictions and consent evidence.
Noise	A complaint was received	Review records and supporting evidence.
Renewal	Enforceability is disputed	Locate the renewal and rent provisions.

WORKSHEET / Review prompts are editable; they do not add new facts.

Documents to review

Use this layout to track source materials before developing the final analysis.

Document	What to locate	Status
Head tenancy	Term, covenants and forfeiture clause	[To review]
Sub-tenancy	Parties, dates and relevant terms	[To review]
Consent records	Express or implied consent material	[To review]
Complaint & notice	Noise evidence and service records	[To review]

Replace bracketed status fields as documents are checked.

02

Issues & framework

Separate the possession question from the renewal question.

The two questions to be addressed

(a)

Possession before expiry

Can Frederick lawfully forfeit the tenancy and recover possession before expiry?

Breach + contractual right + valid procedure

(b)

Renewal at expiry

Can Angela enforce renewal after the two-year term?

Can the new rent be validly determined?

Issue (a): early possession

THE LANDLORD'S QUESTION

Can the tenancy be forfeited before expiry?

Subletting or noise alone does not settle the issue.

Focus the analysis on breach, the forfeiture clause and compliance with notice requirements.

A structured route to forfeiture analysis

01

Breach

Establish a valid breach of covenant.

02

Clause

Identify the contractual right to forfeit.

03

Notice

Review applicable notice requirements.

04

Outcome

Reach a conditional view on recovery.

All conditions must be examined before concluding that possession can lawfully be recovered.

Allegation / issue	Source material	Question to resolve
Unauthorised subletting	[Lease / correspondence]	Was consent required or given?
Late-night noise	[Complaint / records]	Is a material breach substantiated?
Forfeiture procedure	[Notice / service record]	Were all requirements met?
Renewal rent	[Renewal provision]	Can the new rent be determined?

Issue (b): enforceable renewal

Can Angela enforce renewal of the tenancy?

The original analysis turns on the rent-determination mechanism in the renewal arrangement.

The noise complaint is background to this question.

THE KEY VARIABLE

New rent

Can it be validly determined?

Map the renewal question

The provision

Locate the renewal term in the agreement.

The mechanism

Assess how the new rent can be determined.

The conclusion

State the resulting view in conditional terms.

A renewal conclusion depends on the wording and operation of the renewal arrangement.

03

Arguments & evaluation

Compare the positions while keeping the conclusions conditional.

Arguments & Conditional Conclusions

Frederick's Position

Landlord — seeking to recover possession

1. Subletting breach
   Angela sublet to Charles without consent, potentially violating the tenancy agreement.
2. Noise nuisance
   Late-night noise complaints indicate an alleged breach of quiet enjoyment / tenant-like use covenants.
3. Forfeiture right
   If the lease contains a forfeiture clause, Frederick may lawfully terminate early and re-enter.
4. Renewal negotiation
   At expiry, Frederick need not renew on the same terms; the new rent is negotiable.

Angela's Position

Tenant — seeking to remain / renew

1. No proven breach
   A complaint alone is not proof; noise must be substantiated and material.
2. Subletting may be permitted
   The tenancy agreement may allow subletting, or consent may have been implied.
3. Procedural requirements
   Frederick must meet all statutory notice requirements; defective procedure invalidates forfeiture.
4. Renewal right
   A renewal provision, or a valid way to determine fair new rent, may support enforcement of renewal.

CONDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS

(a) Recovery requires a proven breach and strict compliance with contractual and statutory forfeiture requirements.

(b) Renewal turns on whether new rent can be validly determined; the noise complaint is not decisive.

Frederick’s position

Objective: recover possession before the fixed term expires.

LANDLORD

Recovery of possession

Arguments remain subject to proof and procedure.

01 Subletting breach

Angela sublet to Charles without consent, potentially breaching the lease.

02 Noise nuisance

Late-night noise complaints may support an alleged covenant breach.

03 Forfeiture right

A forfeiture clause may permit early termination, subject to compliance.

04 Renewal negotiation

At expiry, Frederick need not renew on the same terms; rent is negotiable.

Angela’s position

Objective: remain in occupation or enforce a renewal.

01 No proven breach

A complaint alone is not proof; alleged noise must be substantiated and material.

02 Subletting may be permitted

The agreement may allow subletting, or consent may have been implied.

03 Procedural requirements

Frederick must satisfy statutory notice requirements before forfeiture.

04 Renewal right

A renewal provision or a valid rent mechanism may support enforcement.

Examine the process.
Test the renewal term.

Compare the positions issue by issue

Issue	Frederick	Angela
Subletting	Without consent; potential breach	May be permitted or consent implied
Noise	Complaint supports alleged breach	Complaint alone is insufficient proof
Forfeiture	Relies on a forfeiture clause	Insists on strict notice compliance
Renewal	New terms and rent are negotiable	Relies on an enforceable renewal term

Compare the legal basis and supporting material for each position.

Separate the briefing from the open questions

In the original briefing

- A two-year head tenancy
- A sub-tenancy involving Charles
- A noise complaint on 1 September

To verify before final analysis

- The wording of the relevant covenants
- The evidence of consent and breach
- The notice and rent provisions

Review prompts provide structure; they are not findings of fact.

Conditional conclusions

(a) Recovery before expiry

Frederick can lawfully recover possession only if he proves a valid breach and strictly complies with the contractual and statutory forfeiture requirements.

(b) Renewal at expiry

Angela’s right to enforce renewal turns on whether the new rent can be validly determined. The noise complaint is background, not decisive.

Summary and handover

01	Facts	Three parties, two agreements and a fixed term.
02	Arguments	Competing claims on breach, forfeiture and renewal.
03	Conclusions	Both outcomes depend on the conditions identified.
